

TO PROSECUTE DR. B. L. BLACK IN SIXTH TRIAL

For the sixth time in two years, Dr. B. L. Black, chiropractor, will be arraigned Thursday in the county court for trial on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. Dr. Black said Monday that he would be ready for trial.

Considerable resentment was aroused by the prosecution of Dr. Black. On the occasion of his leaving jail on the sentence imposed February 10, a band, accompanied by several hundred persons, met the chiropractor as he left the jail, and escorted him in a big parade to his office building. Persons in the parade carried banners protesting against the continued prosecution of the man.

It is understood that at the coming trial many persons will attend the sessions, expressing their sympathy for the man who will be facing his sixth prosecution. Officials of the county attorneys' office deny that the prosecution was instigated by the physicians of the city but Dr. Black declares it was. It is reported that the doctors have hired a medical representative to assist in the prosecution this time.

At each of the former prosecutions many persons took the witness stand and testified that the chiropractor had cured them of ills which were pronounced as incurable by the medical men.

Sharlin was released Saturday on bonds aggregating $11,170, signed by officers of the First National bank.

Sharlin also has been named defendant in civil action brought in the first district court Saturday by Chew Hong Sing, of Juarez, seeking to recover $11,170 for opium alleged to have been purchased by Sharlin in 1917.

A temporary injunction to restrain the First National bank from disposing of any part of the amount deposited there by Sharlin was granted by Judge P. R. Price, with hearing on the action set for Tuesday afternoon. Sharlin, charged with receiving 23 quarts of tequila and 21 quarts of whiskey, pleaded not guilty Saturday before Commissioner A. J. W. Schmidt, and was released on bond of $11,170, with preliminary hearing set for Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

P. R. Furrow and James Pinner were held Saturday under bonds of $250 and $500, respectively, for action by the federal grand jury on plea of guilty to the theft of a sawmill from an interstate shipment.

Greenman Myers was held for action by the federal grand jury under bond of $1000 on a plea of guilty to the charge of importation of drugs. Lizardo Dominguez, charged with possessing and selling liquor, pleaded not guilty. His hearing was continued until September 15. Bond of $1000 was fixed. The defendant failed to make bond.

MANY GREET CULBERTSON AT LUNCHEON

More than 150 persons, at least 25 of them women, crowded into the main dining room of the Hotel Sheldon Monday noon to hear the first public address in El Paso of J. H. Culbertson, Republican candidate for governor. H. B. Gamble presided.

The main theme of Mr. Culbertson's talk was that had business management by the Democrats, particularly in the national administration, had got us into our present scrambled commercial conditions. Our foreign financial policy was scored with special emphasis. Mr. Culbertson pointed out the advantage that would have come to us had the advice of financial and other papers been followed to establish a branch federal reserve bank for handling exports. He said we could have cleared the present wool crop that would not only have brought us cash, but would have avoided the present depression in prices.

Scourge League of Nations. He pointed out that such a bank could have enabled us to supply France with railway equipment and to have taken cashable mortgages from that country. Cotton could be of the same category, he averred. The speaker pointed out that through competition in merchant marine, ocean rates were getting cheaper, while rail rates were getting higher.

A bale of cotton can be brought from Egypt to Boston cheaper than it can be hauled from El Paso to St. Louis, he declared.

Despite low exchange rates Mr. Culbertson said that through barriers we could trade locomotives to Rumania for oil and sell the oil to France. Then, too, we can trade our grade cotton to Germany for industrial alcohol.

Great Britain and the league of nations were scored.

"Mr. McAdoo should have made England give us bonds for the billions we lent her," Mr. Culbertson asserted. "For with these we could have collected at least the interest which England hasn't paid in two years, and we could have sold our bonds today at par, instead of at 55 cents on the dollar."

"If we had a protective tariff and if England would pay us the interest on what she owes us half of our tax burden could be lifted, the candidate told his hearers.

"While England is trying to get us into a league she is undermining our foreign trade with our money," he asserted.

Coming down to Texas, Mr. Culbertson said the governor should be a general manager of the state, just as he would be as the head of a big business.

"If I go to Austin I am going to have system if I have to take time to make them out of my business, along with me," he assured the diners while they applauded.

"If we are not elected we can at least make them out of my business, along with me," he assured the diners while they applauded.

TEXAS CAN BE PUT IN COLUMN FOR THE GOP

It is even now a strong competitor in the world's markets. In the second place, we do not import any great quantity of raw material from Europe. Our imports come largely from countries that were not involved in the war and our imports from these countries greatly exceed our exports. A close investigation will reveal the fact that many of these countries have already enacted tariff legislation against our manufactured commodities which we export to them.

On the other hand, their raw materials are freely imported by the United States in direct competition with our Texas raw materials. This situation must be corrected.

Protection Greatest Business. "The product of raw materials is the greatest business of Texas. Under the present tariff act only a slight measure of protection is afforded to a few of these raw materials and for the majority there is no protection at all. It is a well known fact that the efficiency of unskilled labor which enters largely into the production of raw materials is much the same the world over. The higher wage scale prevailing in Texas makes it essential to have protection for Texas raw materials. It will be argued that this is a selfish statement and that the effect of the protective tariff on the raw materials of Texas and other southern states will result in higher prices for the people of the whole United States. The protective tariff for manufactured articles produced in the northern states reacts to somewhat higher prices for the people of Texas and other southern states.

The cotton growers of Texas will lose more than $200,000,000 this year due to the free competition in vegetable oils and animal fats. The present low price of cottonseed oil is directly due to the importations from foreign countries without sufficient tariff tax.

"Jack" Culbertson, as close friends of the Republican nominee for governor of Texas call him, was born in the oil fields of Pennsylvania in 1878. There is no doubt about the year in which he was born. His ancestors have lived in the United States for a dozen generations and from the burr in his voice there is every reason to believe that the Scotch is strongly predominant in his blood.

Years Way Through College. Culbertson finished the grade schools of Pennsylvania and then went to work as a roughneck in the oil fields. He was four years in this kind of labor, during which period he saved up enough money to pay his way through Penn State college, the Agricultural and Mechanical college of the Keystone state.

Culbertson did not get into this institution without effort. He had to make up practically all the required units and his entrance card was marked "fine day only."

However, at the end of four years he had progressed until he ranked two degrees, one in mechanical arts and one in mining, which gives a small index as to what he can do when he sets out to do it.

After graduating from college he worked for various machinery and mining firms for several years. In 1910, when he was 32 years of age, he landed in Wichita Falls, Texas. He found there a booster enterprise being organized to manufacture motor trucks. He was induced to enter the organization.

Establishes Truck Factory. At that time the Nonpartisan league company had a little less than $30,000 money pledged. He soon had a going concern on his hands.

Culbertson encountered what every industrial enterprise in the south ever encounters at once—a prejudice against buying "home made" goods. This didn't discourage him. He sought the foreign fields of trade, where motor trucks are judged by what they can do, rather than where they are made. Today he is exporting Wichita trucks to 21 foreign countries, by far the widest distribution of any motor truck made anywhere on earth.

His organization has grown to a healthy, seasoned concern, with $200,000 paid up capital, with over two and a half million dollars assets and doing a business of upward of $1,000,000 a year. It is one of the very oldest exclusive truck factories in the world; it has never been reorganized financially and it has always been under Culbertson's direct management.

Is An "Open Shop" Man. "Jack" Culbertson is one of the 75 members of the Federal Foreign Trade council of the United States, which is presided over by James Farrell, the state head of the United Steel corporation. He has refused many offers to sever his Texas connections and take charge of the export department of some of the largest banking institutions of the United States.

In Wichita Falls he is a Shriner, an Elk, a member of the chamber of commerce and other organizations and is an officer of the Presbyterian church. He is also a member of the board of governors of the Southwestern Open Shop association.

Talks in Culbertson's first venture in politics. The nomination came to him as a distinct surprise. His first inclination was to turn it down cold. Then he reflected what Texas had done for him and he felt that in a measure he could lessen his debt to the state if he could help in electing a feeling that the time has arrived when a house cleaning was needed in Texas affairs. He will make an active campaign from now until election day.

"Pinto As An Old Shoe." Personally Culbertson is as plain as an old shoe. He has no airs, no airs, no airs. Every man, woman and child in Wichita Falls calls him "Jack" and there is nothing effeminate in this name when he wears it. He owns his own home, but is a bachelor. He looks as if he would make a gentle and kind husband and is a surprisingly able to provide the comforts as well as the necessities of life for someone. He never has a legal residence outside of Texas since he became of age and he does not make any "proud boast" that he has "never scratched a ticket."

He is slightly bow-legged and is a little sensitive on this point. He owns a fleet of passenger cars, a pet bear and other such things.

Culbertson is also sustaining two scholarships, one in the University of Texas and one in the Agricultural and Mechanical college of Texas, each worth $100 a year, in highway engineering. He has educated a young man and woman to enter his organization today many of the heads of departments began working for him as office boys and women as stenographers. He is a knowing sort of a way. He does it when he talks politics.

SPECIAL ELECTION WATCHERS. Denver, Colo., Sept. 12.—The application filed with the state supreme court by Samuel D. Nicholson, a candidate for nomination for United States senator, asking for special watchers at the polls during tomorrow's primary election, was granted today.

"WEAKLY" LUNCH TO BE HELD. El Paso real estate board announces it will hold a "weakly" luncheon at the Toltec club tomorrow. The notice states it will be a "weakly" meeting with plenty of nuts on hand. Four five-minute speeches will be made. Plans for selling El Paso real estate during exposition week will be made.
